JIM HEADRIGE

Born in Glasgow in 1939, Jim served in the Parachute Regiment during his National Service.

He played Professional Football for Clydebank and it was at this time that he first became interested in the treatment of sports injuries.

At the invitation of Middlesbrough manager Stan Anderson, Jim moved to Ayresome Park as assistant trainer in 1966, a job he held for two years before promotion to first team trainer at the age of 28, at that time the youngest man in football to hold such a responsible position.

After 11 years on Teeside, Jim took up an appointment in the United Arab Emirates, where he stayed just 12 months before returning to England to a job with Bolton Wanderers in 1978. In 1981, very soon after joining United, Ron Atkinson made one of his first appointments when he persuaded Jim to come to Manchester United.

JIM HEADRIGE — 'THE BEST IN TH

United fans will know that first and foremost, I am a football fan and usually I'm ready with a very warm welcome as a new season commences. Unfortunately, circumstances dictate that this is a sad occasion as we and Bolton Wanderers meet to honour the memory of Jim Headrige.

Jim died suddenly, exactly 12 months ago whilst training at the Cliff with a group of our injured players. He had only been with us for a few short weeks, but in all my years in the game, I cannot recall a man, at any level, who so quickly won the respect and admiration of his colleagues. Make no mistake, Jim was the best physio in the game — and I mean no disrespect whatsoever, to the man he replaced, or indeed, the man who succeeded him.

When I first arrived at Old Trafford, I asked for, and was granted, my own staff around me. Jim was at the top of my shopping list, I'm proud to say he accepted the invitation, and achieved for just a few short weeks what was, in the words of his wife Margaret, 'The fulfillment of a lifetimes ambition.'

THE BUSINESS' says RON ATKINSON

Since his untimely death, I've been asked on more than one occasion, just what was it about the man that made him so good? Obviously, as I said earlier, he was for me, the best in the game, but more than that, he had this tremendous ability to get on with people. Soon after he arrived here, we were off on a pre-season tour of Norway, and to see experienced international players in such awe of the man was remarkable.

I had, once before, tried to get Jim to join me, that was during my time at the Hawthorns. On that occasion he turned me down. In the short time we worked together here at Old Trafford I saw more than enough to confirm what I already knew. He was the best and he is still sadly missed.

I am hoping that Jim's wife and children Karen, Lynn and Gary will be able to join us this evening and I can assure you, the fans, that it is our aim to give you value for your money. On behalf of the family, I thank you for your support, and I extend a very warm welcome to Bolton Wanderers and their new manager John McGovern, I hope they do as well as ourselves this season, and we aim to win the League!
